Connecting the Traits to the Writing Process

Prewrite

Focus and Coherence  What topic should I write about? What is my thesis? What details should I include or exclude?

Organization  How should I organize my details? Which graphic organizer should I use for my planning?

Development of Ideas  What is my approach to the topic?

Focus and Coherence  How can I choose ideas that support my thesis?

Organization  How do I want to arrange my ideas?

Development of Ideas  How do I ensure that my main points are clear?

Voice  How do I want to sound?
Organize

What do I organize my details? Do graphic organizing when I use my planner.

Develop my ideas

What is my approach to a topic?

Draft

Focus on cohesion

What do I choose my ideas to support my thesis?

Organize

What do I want to arrange my ideas?

Develop my ideas

What do I ensure my main points are clear?

Voice

What do I want to say?

Color can be difficult to know what to do with. In this example, making the items a nested list eliminates the need for the color to be shown in braille. BE CAREFUL to check to be sure the specific colors have no meaning among the rest of the text of the book being transcribed. If the color has meaning, or relates to specific other things within the text, transcriber-defined typeform indicators should be used to represent the colors. DO NOT change the color to bold. If the print emphasis has meaning, print should be followed. BF 5.1.2
Focus on traits to write a process.

Write about what is my initial what details md I include or exclude.

Organize in what plan/organizing my details. Use graphic organizing my planner.

Approach to topic.

Draft.

Focus on what is my voice or support my voice.

Organize in what I want to organize my ideas.

Develop it with ideas. This is my main points to make.

Voice who I want to some.

This is the same example with the color shown using four of the five transcriber-defined typeform indicators.

Karl Marx and Class Conflict

Karl Marx (1818–1883) not only influenced sociology but also left his mark on world history. Marx’s influence has been so great that even the Wall Street Journal, that staunch advocate of capitalism, has called him one of the three greatest modern thinkers (the other two being Sigmund Freud and Albert Einstein).

Like Comte, Marx thought that people should try to change society. His proposal for change was radical: revolution. This got him thrown out of Germany, and he settled in England. Marx believed that the engine of human history is class conflict. He said that society is made up of two social classes, and they are natural enemies of one another: the bourgeoisie (boo-shwa-ZEE) (the capitalists, those who own the means of production—the money, land, factories, and machines) and the proletariat (the exploited workers, who do not own the means of production). Eventually, the workers will unite and break their chains of bondage. The workers’ revolution will be bloody, but it will usher in a classless society, one free of exploitation. People will work according to their abilities and receive goods and services according to their needs (Marx and Engels 1848/1967).

Marxism is not the same as communism. Although Marx proposed revolution as the way for workers to gain control of society, he did not develop the political system called communism. This is a later application of his ideas. Marx himself felt disgusted when he heard debates about his insights into social life. After listening to some of the positions attributed to him, he shook his head and said, “I am not a Marxist” (Debriner 1969:222; Gitlin 1997:89).

Unlike Comte and Spencer, Marx did not think of himself as a sociologist—and with his reputation for communism and revolution, many sociologists wish that no one else did either. Because of his insights into the relationship between the social classes, Marx is generally recognized as a significant early sociologist. He introduced conflict theory, one of today’s major perspectives in sociology. Later, we will examine this perspective in detail.

Emile Durkheim and Social Integration

Until the time of Emile Durkheim (1858–1917), sociology was viewed as part of history and economics. Durkheim, who grew up in France, wanted to change this, and his major professional goal was to get sociology recognized as a separate academic discipline (Coser 1977). He achieved this goal in 1887 when the University of Bordeaux awarded him the world’s first academic appointment in sociology.

Durkheim’s second goal was to show how social forces affect people’s behavior. To accomplish this, he conducted rigorous research. Comparing the suicide rates of several European countries, Durkheim (1897/1966) found that each country has a different Study Figure 17.2.1. In a uniform pattern, organisms spread evenly through their ecosystem. A clumped pattern is when organisms of the same population form small groups through the ecosystem. In a random pattern, organisms of a population are distributed in no particular way.

Express Lab 17

Materials
- 6 index cards
- six-sided number cube
- 30 buttons

Procedure
1. With a pen, label the index cards from 1 to 6.
2. Make a rectangle with two rows of index cards. In row 1, lay out index cards 1 to 3. In row 2, lay out index cards 4 to 6. The rectangle represents an ecosystem.
3. Each button represents one organism in a population. Select a distribution pattern: uniform, clumped, or random.
4. Put the buttons on the rectangle to show the distribution pattern you selected.
5. Roll the number cube. Find the card with that number. The organisms on this index card represent your sample.

Analysis
1. Does your sample contain one-sixth of the organisms in your ecosystem? Explain your answer.
2. How do distribution patterns affect sampling?
3. Which pattern will give the best estimate of true population size?

Example 14 – Play with Sidebars

Sample Script

In the following script by Brandi Lee, the main character discovers that she may be dating the wrong boy. The side notes identify key points in the development of the play.

Friends and More

Characters:  Gina, a high school student
Jared, Gina's boyfriend
Beth, Gina's friend
Pete, Gina's best friend

(Gina and Jared are on a platform in a pool of light. Beth and Pete sit in chairs, one on each side of the stage.)

GINA: You're breaking our date?
JARED: Look, Gina, you want to go to that concert. I don't. My dad said he'll take me fishing, and I'd rather do that.

BETH: (A light comes up on her.) Jerk!
JARED: You could come with us. It would be fun!

PETE: (A light comes up on him.) Not for the fish!

GINA: No, that's all right. You should spend some time with your dad. (The lights go down on Beth and Pete.)

JARED: Great. I'll call you tomorrow, okay?

GINA: Sure.

(Beth rises and approaches Gina. Gina is practicing her ballet, doing deep and graceful dips.)

BETH: He dumped you? Oh, Gina, you poor thing!

JARED: (His light comes up.) Jeez, it's just a date! (Light goes down.)

GINA: (Laughing and continuing her practicing.) He broke a date, Beth, not my heart! Besides, he didn't dump me. We're still together.

BETH: Then why are you going to this concert alone? (Gina stops dancing.)

GINA: You want to come?

BETH: You have got to be kidding! Ask Pete! He loves that stuff.
1. Pete: "It's a big school audit.
2. Betty: "It's boyfr
3. Bob: "It's fr
4. Pete: "It's fr

Example 15 – Poetry with Rhyme Scheme

At the Un-National Monument Along the Canadian Border
William Stafford

This is the field where the battle did not happen, where the unknown soldier did not die.
This is the field where grass joined hands,
where no monument stands,
and the only heroic thing is the sky.

Birds fly here without any sound,
unfolding their wings across the open.
No people killed — or were killed — on this ground hallowed by neglect and an air so tame that people celebrate it by forgetting its name.
Lines 6-18: Rhyme scheme letters are placed at the right margin. Place each letter, preceded by the grade 1 indicator as required, at the right margin of the braille line on which the lettered line begins. End all lines in this format so that at least two blank cells are left before the rhyme scheme letters. BF 15.7.2

Line 12: A blank line is required between stanzas of a poem (follow print). BF 13.4.1
Example 16 – Line-Numbered Material/Reference Notes/Sidebar

They had taken the bike to the garage, and the man there was just telling them that the only pub in the village was the Rising Sun, where Mr. Noakes might be able to give them a bed, when a bus pulled up in front of the petrol pumps.

“Look,” the garage owner said, “there’s Mr. Noakes just getting out of the bus now, Sid!” he called.

But Mr. Noakes was not able to come to them at once. Two old people were climbing slowly out of the bus ahead of him—a blind man with a white stick, and a withered, frail old lady in a black satin dress and hat. “Careful now, George,” she was saying, “mind ee be careful with my son William.”

“I’m being careful, Mr. Hatchings,” the conductor said patiently, as he almost lifted the unsteady old pair off the bus platform. The driver had stopped his engine, and everyone on the bus was taking a mild and sympathetic interest, except for Mr. Noakes just behind who was cursing irritably at the delay. When the two old people were on the narrow pavement, the conductor saw that they were going to have trouble with a bicycle that was propped against the curb just ahead of them; he picked it up and stood holding it until they had passed the line of petrol pumps and were going slowly off along a path across the fields. Then, grimly, he put it back, jumped hurriedly into the bus, and rang his bell.

“Old nuisances,” Mr. Noakes said furiously. “Wasting public time. Every week that palaver goes on, taking the old man to Midwick Hospital Outpatients and back again, I know what I’d do with ‘em, Put to sleep, that sort ought to be.”

Mr. Noakes was a repulsive-looking individual, but when he heard that Tom and Lily wanted a room for the night, he changed completely and gave them a leer that was full of false goodwill. He was a big, red-faced man with wet, full lips, bulging pale-gray bloodshot eyes, and a crop of stiff greasy black hair. He wore tennis shoes.

“How many rooms, eh?” he said, looking sentimentally at Lily’s pale prettiness. “Want a bed for the night, eh?” and he laughed a disgusting laugh that sounded like thick oil coming out of a bottle, heh-heh-heh-heh, and gave Lily a tremendous pinch on her arm. Disengaging himself as politely as she could, she stooped and picked up something from the pavement. They followed Mr. Noakes grumpily up the street to the Rising Sun.

While they were eating their baked beans, Mr. Noakes stood over their table grimacing at them. Lily unwisely confided to him that they were looking for a bit of sunshine. Mr. Noakes’s laughter nearly shook down the ramshackle building.

“Sunshine! Oh my Gawd! That’s a good ‘un! Hear that, Mother?” he bawled to his wife. “They’re looking for a bit of sunshine, Heh-heh-heh-heh-heh–heh!

Lines 1-11: The sidebar material is boxed to keep it separate from the main text. Because this material is not line-numbered, it can be placed on line 1 (or 25) of the braille page. The boxed material is within the line-numbered text and must maintain the appropriate right margin. This is based on the longest line number on this page which is line 100 (braille line 23).

Line 12: A blank line follows a box. BF 7.2
Line 17: Another numbered reference note

Line 21: The circled letter is treated as a reference note. A transcriber-defined shape indicator is used to represent the circle and the identifying letter follows. The symbol needs to be defined on the Special Symbols page and the format needs to be described on the Transcriber’s Notes page.

Special Symbols page:

Circle shape preceding lettered reference notes

Print uses circled letters within the text to refer readers to material printed in the margins. In braille, the symbol `.` is used to represent the circle. The shape is followed, unspaced, by the applicable reference letter.

Line 24: The bold underlined words have associated reference notes. A transcriber’s note is required to alert the reader to this fact.

In print, words that are bold and underlined have associated reference notes.
Line 4: Note separation line

Lines 5-12: Reference notes are in the order in which they appear within the text. Notes use margins 1-3. Follow print for reference marks and emphasis. If print does not repeat the reference mark in the note, follow print. Notes use the entire width of the braille line. BF 16.5

Line 11: Emphasis is omitted from part of speech abbreviations; a transcriber's note is required. BF 5.3.4
Example 17 – Reference Notes/Sidebar

Density-independent factor
- A factor that affects population size, but does not depend on population density.
- Immigrate
  - To move into a population.
- Emigrate
  - To leave a population.
- Boom-bust cycle
  - A period in which the densities of populations increase or decrease at the same time.
- Uniform
  - When a population spreads out evenly through an ecosystem.
- Clumped
  - When a population spreads out in small groups through an ecosystem.
- Random

Density-independent factors do not depend on population density. These factors affect the same percentage of the population regardless of its density. Examples of density-independent factors are fires, freezes, droughts, and floods. Density-independent factors often are important in regulating the growth of a population. Both density-dependent factors and density-independent factors affect population size.

Other factors also affect population growth. Organisms immigrate, or move into a population. Organisms emigrate, or leave a population.

Some populations have boom-bust cycles. In these cycles, populations rely on other populations for survival. Their densities affect each other. As one population grows, the other population also grows. This is a boom period. As one population decreases, another population also decreases. This is a bust period. There are many causes of boom-bust cycles.

Boom-bust cycles respond to various factors. One factor is the changes in predator and prey populations. Other factors are the quality and amount of the prey’s food.

Population Distribution
- Factors that affect population growth also affect how organisms in a population distribute themselves throughout an ecosystem.
- Organisms in the same population spread out in three patterns: uniform, clumped, and random.
When a text is written completely in blocked paragraphs, change the format to indented paragraphs. A transcriber’s note is required. BF 1.9.3

In print, all paragraphs are blocked. In braille, paragraphs are indented.

Within this text, all bold words have associated reference notes. Use a transcriber’s note to alert the reader to this fact.

Bold words within the text have associated reference notes.

Lines 14-16: follow print for emphasis on the reference notes. When reference notes are entirely in some kind of print typeform (in this case italics), that emphasis can be ignored. The bold on the entry words for the notes is retained for distinction purposes. BF 16.5

Example 20 – Glossary

Using Words Correctly
This section will help you to choose between words that are often confused or misused.

a lot ≠ allot
A lot means “many” and is always written as two words, never as one word. Allot means “to assign” or “to give out.”

I have a lot of friends who like to eat. We allot one hour for lunch.

a while ≠ awhile
The two-word form a while is often preceded by the prepositions after, for, or in. The one-word form awhile is used without a preposition.

Let’s stop here for a while.
Let’s stop here awhile.

accept ≠ except
Accept is a verb that means “to receive.” Except can be a verb meaning “to leave out” or a preposition meaning “excluding.”

I accept everything you say, except your point about music.

advice ≠ advise
Advice is a noun that means “ideas about how to solve a problem.” Advise is a verb and means “to give advice.”

I will give you advice about your problem today, but do not ask me to advise you again tomorrow.

affect ≠ effect
Affect is a verb. It means “to cause a change in” or “to influence.” Effect as a verb means “to bring about.” As a noun, effect means “result.”

Sunshine will affect my plants positively.
The governor is working to effect change.
The rain had no effect on our spirits.

ain’t
Ain’t is not used in formal English. Use the correct form of the verb be with the word not: is not, isn’t, are not, or aren’t.

We are not going to sing in front of you.
I am not going to practice today.

all ready ≠ already
Use the two-word form, all ready, to mean “completely finished.” Use the one-word form, already, to mean “previously.”

We waited an hour for dinner to be all ready.
It is a good thing I have already eaten today.

alright ≠ all right
The expression all right means “OK” and should be written as two words.
The one-word form, alright, is not used in formal writing.

I hope it is all right that I am early.
